Declaration:

The BUILD Charity is committed to the fair treatment of its staff, potential staff, volunteers or users of its services, regardless of race, gender, religion, sexual orientation, age, responsibilities for dependents, physical or mental disability or offending background.

The Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 makes it illegal for employers or prospective employers to take into account offences from which the person concerned is deemed to be rehabilitated. This means that after a certain period of time (which will depend on the offence and the length and severity of the punishment) the person concerned is to be assessed as if the conviction had never taken place.

There are however, exceptions to this where all previous offences can be disclosed. This includes employment that enables access to vulnerable persons such as is the case with posts that are available within The BUILD Charity. The voluntary role you have applied for is exempt from the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 and therefore requires you to disclose relevant offences as detailed below.

We actively promote equality of opportunity for all with the right skills talent or potential and welcome applications from a wide range of candidates, including those with criminal records. Having a criminal record will not necessarily bar an applicant from working, or volunteering for BUILD Charity the nature of the disclosed conviction and its relevance to the post in question will be considered. We select all candidates based on their skills qualifications and experience and will not discriminate unfairly against applicants with a criminal record. However, BUILD Charity recognises that it has a duty to its service users and the wider community to take account of offences that have a direct bearing on a candidate's suitability for a particular post. For this reason, we require all applicants to provide information on all unspent convictions. This includes cautions, reprimands, warnings and any pending criminal charges.

I have information to declare:
